

Craig Crawford

In addition to continuing to be a “young person” himself, Craig puts his money where his mouth is every day. He is currently an elementary school principal, but has worked with students from three to 73. He has 16 years' experience as an educator. He owned his own Domino's Pizza Franchise in a previous life. Craig is a member of his local Kiwanis Club and is currently First Vice-President. He is the president of the local Salvation Army Board of Directors. And he is Vice-President of the Montana Association of Elementary and Middle School Principals. He teaches classes to aspiring teachers at the local college as well. For the past seven years, he has been Santa Claus for local schools and childrens' shelters.

In his spare time, he is completing his doctorate in Educational Leadership through the University of Montana- Go Griz! He was born in New Jersey (youngest of six) and has lived in Tennessee, Texas, and Georgia before getting to his heart's home, Montana. Craig has lived in Montana for seven years and can't imagine living anywhere else. He loves hiking, camping, backpacking, fishing, and playing golf. He keeps his iPod full of music (mostly 80's and Tay Tay), is a warehouse of obscure movie lines, and enjoys laughing. Each March he temporarily loses his mind for the NCAA basketball tournament. Craig has two amazing kids who are young adults and the best accomplishment of his life. He has a dog, named “Montana” (yep, he loves it that much!)
