

Greg Long

Greg has spent half of his life as a young person, and the other half working on behalf of young people. He travels to more than 25 states each year, communicating the importance of leadership, life skills & character to students, parents, educators and community leaders. He has presented at international conferences on three continents.

His professional expertise has been honed and refined through more than 30 years of volunteering in service clubs, community leadership organizations, faith-based settings and youth performing arts groups. Greg is a Magna Cum Laude graduate from Park University, with a Masters in Philanthropic Studies, through the Indiana University School of Philanthropy.

In addition to serving as a Kiwanis Key Leader Facilitator, Greg consults with service clubs and non-profit organizations, as well as teaching business courses for two colleges.
